

Short Specialisation degrees 2021/2022

Mediation and Restorative Justice. Methodology and tools for the application in the familiar, penal, community, organizational and commercial fields.

Professional outlets: The acquired skills concern the generation of a third reality of mediation between the conflicting parties, and can be identified in: the construction and consolidation of common objectives, the use of negotiation to generate a situation in which the parties manage the decision-making process, the identification and the use of process-indicators and outcome-indicators for the assessment and monitoring of the interventions. Also, the students will build project-design skills in the mediation and restorative justice fields, and learn to use methodologies to analyse the costs and benefits of services/brokerage operations.
