Abstract del progetto	The long summer of migration in 2015 saw an increasing number of people on the move trying to reach Western and Northern Europe via the so-called 'Balkan route'. Since 2015, the pressure on the mechanisms of the European migration and border regime has increased, so the Dublin system, one of the cornerstones of the EU migration policy, was de facto suspended. With the closure of the route and the conclusion, in 2016, of the EU-Turkey deal, the Western Balkans has become a 'waiting space', a 'dumping ground' for migrants. The programme will focus on this region, the ongoing EU accession process, and the integration of the Balkans into the European migration and border regime. The programme explores the Europeanization of migration and border policies, aspects of externalisation and securitization of control procedures, and the different forms of (im)mobility and migration. Questions to be addressed include: How images shape our ideas about the Balkans? How the Balkans Route narrative has shaped current ideas and prejudices about mobility and marginalisation? The programme includes an excursion to Zagreb, Croatia, from 18 to 23 March 2024 (the schedule is subject to changes). There will be pre- and post-excursion online sessions. During the excursion, students from Osnabruek, Zagreb and Padua will attend seminars organised at the University of Zagreb and meet local NGOs and other organisations.
