A fully upside-down house was built in Shanghai. It features a bathroom, bedrooms, a kitchen, and a living area.

The house is a place where everything is turned upside down, including furniture and even the cutlery. Many visitors are shocked and dizzy. One tourist said that the most interesting room was the bathroom. She felt like the water might be falling out of the toilet.

Polish designers created the house, and it took five months to build. The house was opened to the public last week.

Scientists discovered the brightest object in the universe, and they named it J0529-4351. They used the Very Large Telescope in Chile.

The object is a quasar, a very big object which emits large amounts of energy. It shines 500 trillion times brighter than the Sun and hosts the fastest-growing black hole scientists ever recorded. The distance from Earth is 12 billion light-years and it emphasizes the object's brightness.

These findings challenge all we know about the early universe and how it formed. It suggests that black holes formed shortly after the Big Bang. Understanding this could help scientists find out what happened in the early days of the universe.

People discovered dinosaur footprints in the Dinosaur Valley State Park in Texas, US. Park officials said that the footprints could be over 113 million years old, and they could be the longest dinosaur track in North America. Many footprints in the park became visible and invisible again. It depended on weather and the water in rivers. The Paluxy River shrank because it rained very little in previous months. Thanks to this, people could see footprints which were usually at the bottom of the river.

The footprints were under layers of sediment and other material for more than 20 years. For a few days, people could see and touch them. Then, they disappeared underwater again.

The eurozone, a group of 20 countries, had a hard time growing its economy last year. It almost went into a recession.

Germany is a significant contributor to the euro area, but it had big problems last year. This caused the whole area to not grow much. Experts say that it is because of problems in Germany's business and trade with other countries. The United States, another big economy, did much better. While both areas faced higher prices, the US grew by 2.5%, while the eurozone only managed around 0.5%. There were also strikes and protests about high prices, and experts think things might not get much better until 2025.

Reports say that 70 million people worldwide stutter. This is about one percent of the whole population.

People who stutter have problems when they speak. Usually, they make a pause before they say a difficult word, or they repeat the same word several times. Scientists found that these people have different brains, so you cannot always stop a stutter.

More people in one family often stutter, so the condition is genetic, too. Interestingly, men stutter three times more than women, but scientists don't really know why.

In northern California, a woman faced a dangerous 15-hour situation after her pickup truck overturned in a river during heavy rain.

A helicopter team from the California Highway Patrol Air Operations started a daring rescue. They lifted the woman from the rushing waters using a harness. The woman wanted to cross Del Valle Creek, about 35 miles east of San Francisco, but she got stuck. She spent the night on top of her car, which probably saved her life. She survived with minor injuries.

A similar incident took place in 2012 on the same creek.

Jimmy Grewal lives in Dubai, and for all his life, Apple computers and devices have interested him.

Grewal has a collection of about 200 Apple computers and accessories. Some of them are his own, and some of them are the ones which he wanted to have. Grewal said that the collection was special because when he looked at the old computers, it felt like looking at his own childhood. Grewal said that some of the computers weren't very good, and not many people bought them. Yet for Grewal, they were a sign that if you work hard, you'll be successful one day.

He wants to sell some of his computers to make enough money to organize an exhibition.

The world's largest cruise ship Icon of the Seas is ready for its first journey. It uses liquefied natural gas (LNG). LNG is cleaner than the fuel which ships normally use, but some experts worry about methane emissions. The ship has a capacity for 8,000 passengers and 20 decks. Such cruises are becoming more popular.

The International Council on Clean Transportation says that LNG may produce over 120% more greenhouse gas emissions than usual fuel.

Hermit crabs around the world are doing something new – they are choosing plastic shells instead of natural ones.

Scientists found this out by looking at pictures on the internet. They saw 386 crabs using plastic caps as shells. Ten out of sixteen types of these crabs from tropical places are doing this. The crabs might pick plastic shells for a few reasons, like showing off to find mates or because plastic is lighter. Scientists need to check how this might change hermit crabs over time.

In the 1970s, scientists detected a signal, but it never repeated after that time. Now, scientists focus on exoplanets, which are planets outside our solar system. Some of them are in the right distance from a sun, just like our planet.

India's Prime Minister Narendra Modi recently inaugurated a new Hindu temple in Ayodhya. The temple replaced a mosque demolished 30 years ago. The ceremony was full of rituals and offerings, and many people came to see it. Many consider it an important religious moment. It symbolizes Lord Ram's return for them. But critics say that Modi planned the event carefully because of the upcoming elections. Workers should complete the temple next year. Historical disputes over Ayodhya started over a century ago, and they escalated in 1992 with the mosque's destruction.

In a forward-thinking move, Brazil's Rio de Janeiro collaborates with Morfo, a startup, to employ drones for reforestation.

Launched jointly by the city hall and Morfo, this green initiative leverages advanced technology to speed up reforestation in challenging landscapes. Drones equipped with artificial intelligence (AI) analyze soil and native species data to identify optimal areas for seeding local species. This method proves highly efficient. Each drone disperses 180 seed capsules per minute, presenting a 100-fold increase in speed compared to traditional manual methods. The use of drones and AI speeds up the process of nurturing seedlings and transporting them to planting sites.

A hot air balloon was flying over the ocean in Australia with 9 people on board. It was running low on fuel and it was not able to land properly. The people were afraid that the balloon would ditch into the ocean, but a passing boat saw it and helped. The pilot was able to offload the passengers one at a time. Once the passengers were safe, the balloon was light enough for the pilot to land safely on a beach. He received a lot of praise for his actions.

Robots are part of our lives, and they are about to be even more present. The first example is going to be self-driving cars. In the next 20 or 30 years, we will start to see serious humanoid robots in our homes. They will do all the things that we see in science fiction. Robots intrigue people but also scare them. The curator of the Science Museum in London says that this reaction is natural and human.

Kenya's Dandora landfill in Nairobi is one of the world's largest landfills. The site is full of single-use plastics, although the country is trying hard to be more eco-friendly. Kenya wants a global deal on plastics, and delegates are meeting to discuss the first deal on plastic pollution. In 2017, Kenya implemented strict laws against plastic bags, with severe penalties for their use. The recent law makes producers responsible for plastic waste, rather than consumers.

Renault is setting big goals for its electric cars. They predict Ampere, their electric unit, will make a lot of money – 10 billion euros in 2025 and 25 billion euros in 2031.

The company plans to sell shares in 2024, but it is a bit tricky because not many people want electric cars now, and there is tough competition, especially from China. Renault's boss Luca de Meo says that Renault has enough money for Ampere, but they prefer selling shares because it helps them grow faster. But if not enough people think that Ampere is worth a lot, they won't sell shares.

Lake Titicaca is the largest freshwater lake in the Andes. It faces a crisis as water levels are dropping, which impacts local farmers.

Millions of people depend on the lake, as well as animals. Long periods without rain, worsened by the El Nino phenomenon and increasing global temperatures, exposed lakebeds. For pre-Columbian communities, the lake was very important and they protected it for hundreds of years. Now, farmers have to deal with dry crops and empty wells. In many places, they can't use boats but they have to walk across the lake.

A lion named Kimba escaped from a circus near Rome, Italy.

Mayor Alessandro Grando warned residents to stay home as police and circus staff worked to catch the lion. The man who was responsible for circus animals assured that the lion was not dangerous. At last, the police sedated and captured the animal, but local people worried very much. The mayor hoped that the incident would end animal exploitation in circuses.

Once again, animal rights groups spoke about how dangerous it was to keep animals in circuses.

In England, archaeologists found a 3000-year-old wooden wheel. It is very well-preserved. It is the oldest and most complete wheel found in Britain.

It is only one of many finds at the site near Cambridgeshire. Last month, experts discovered pieces of food in bowls. Somebody was eating the food when a fire destroyed the village. One archaeologist said that it was like stepping into somebody's life or somebody's home.

These discoveries give archaeologists a new picture about the way people lived between 1100-800 bc. The team who is working there calls the site a British version of the Roman town of Pompeii.

Two cliff divers jumped from 30 metres into the Zambezi River near Victoria Falls. This part of the river forms the boundary between Zambia and Zimbabwe. The cliff divers are professionals. They normally jump from between 26.5 and 28 metres, so this was a new game for them. The falls are the world's largest in combined depth and width and are also known as Mosi-oa-Tunya or the Smoke that Thunders.

Dianne Feinstein, the US Senate's oldest-serving member and a pioneering figure in American politics, died at the age of 90. Feinstein was a gun control advocate, and she worked hard to implement the first federal ban on assault weapons. She also played an important role in investigating the CIA's use of torture on foreign terrorism suspects. President Joe Biden said that Feinstein was tough and loyal. She was not only a strong politician but also a kind friend.

Only once a year, the mating season for pandas happens. The females are only able to get pregnant for two or three days in a year, which makes getting pregnant difficult. In a zoo in Vienna, Austria, two pandas mated a few times, which is a rare event in a zoo. The zoo filmed the act and released the video. The length of a panda's pregnancy is up to 163 days, so the zoo must wait to see if the mating was a success.

Robert Fico, a pro-Russian politician, won the Slovakian election last weekend. His party SMER-SSD secured nearly 23% of the vote, and he will try to form a new government. Fico stands against the EU's military support for Ukraine, just like Hungary's Prime Minister Viktor Orban. While Fico wants to send humanitarian aid to Ukraine, he doesn't want to provide them with weapons. Slovakia is a NATO member, but many people sympathize with Russia's opinion that the West wants to harm Moscow.

A big fire occurred in two connected nightclubs in Murcia, Spain, and it killed at least 13 people. Rescue teams continue their search for missing people, and they worry that there could be more dead people. The work was hard because a roof collapsed in the Fonda nightclub, and it damaged the place very badly. The fire started early in the morning at the Teatre nightclub, located on the outskirts of Murcia. Some people reported that they left just moments before alarms and lights signaled the fire's outbreak

Lego, a famous toy company from Denmark, stopped trying to make its bricks without using oil-based plastics. Lego found out that a new material which they tried actually produces more carbon emissions. Lego's CEO said that they tested many materials but couldn't find a good one but they are still working on this and want to make their toys using eco-friendly materials by 2032. Lego started trying to replace plastic bricks with eco-friendly ones in 2020. The hard part is finding a material that is good for the environment and still looks and sounds like the old plastic bricks.

Antarctica's sea ice reached its smallest amount ever this winter, a report says. This is causing worries among scientists who believe that climate change is causing problems in the southern part of the world. This change could harm animals like penguins which depend on the sea ice for living and raising their babies. It could also make global warming worse because less ice reflects less sunlight into space. The report said that the sea ice covered 16.96 million square kilometers at its largest point on September 10.

Senator Bob Menendez from New Jersey was charged with corruption. He told reporters that he had 480,000 dollars in cash at home for emergencies. He explained that was taking out cash for emergencies for 30 years because his authorities in Cuba took his family's properties. Menendez's parents were from Cuba, but he was born in New York. He said that some people were too quick to judge him because he's Latino and they wanted him to quit his job. The charges against him and his wife involve using his Senate role to help Egypt's government.

Last Sunday, something amazing happened in Utah, US. A capsule, which carried the biggest sample of soil ever taken from the surface of an asteroid, landed safely in the Utah desert. A spaceship called OSIRIS-Rex released the capsule from around 107,000 kilometers away from Earth. The capsule then made a journey through the Earth's sky. After this, the capsule landed safely in a place used by the US military for testing and training. The landing was the result of a six-year effort by NASA and the University of Arizona working together.

The Philippines is upset because China's coast guard put up a floating barrier in a part of the South China Sea. This barrier stops Filipino fishermen from going there and fishing. The Philippine Coast Guard and Bureau of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources are very unhappy about this and they want to protect their rights in the sea. China claims a lot of the South China Sea, but this overlaps with areas that belong to other countries, like Vietnam, Malaysia, Brunei, Indonesia, and the Philippines.

A pregnant gorilla at a zoo in England had problems, and the baby had to be taken out by caesarean section. The baby gorilla is the first gorilla to be successfully born by caesarean section. The baby hasn't got a name yet, but she is over a kilo heavy and doing fine. A zookeeper said that she already has quite a strong character like her mother. She lets people know when she's awake and when she's hungry. Unusually, a human gyn aecologist carried out the caesarean section. He said that the operation was very similar to operating on a human.

Two Lockheed Martin F-35A fighter jets did something special – they landed on a highway. This could help them be safer during a war. The planes belong to the Royal Norwegian Air Force and they landed in Tervo, Finland. They got fuel while their engines were running. This is called hotpit refuelling. Major General Rolf Folland, the leader of the Royal Norwegian Air Force, said that fighter jets are not safe when they are on the ground. So, using small airfields and now motorways makes them safer during a war.

Brazil's top court made an important decision about Indigenous land rights. The court voted against a plan supported by big farming businesses which tried to limit these rights. This decision means that Indigenous people can still claim land which they didn't live on in 1988. People in Brazil celebrated this news, especially in the Amazon region, where many Indigenous people live. They are happy because this decision protects their history and rights.

The block contains several handwritten marks. At the top right is a signature that appears to be 'GUS'. Below it and to the left are two more signatures: one that looks like 'B' and another that is more complex, possibly 'PR' or 'JR'. At the bottom left is a large, stylized signature that looks like 'WJ'.
