“Good evening, Professor. I am writing to you and the sadness I feel due to the ending of this magical adventure is increasing at times. I write this to you after we have presented our final innovation project, because the happiness, joy and pride run through my veins right now is enormous. I wanted to express how I feel (apart from tired, because it has been a very demanding process), and I do not remember having lived such a moment as a student. I know that I am not the only one feeling this happiness, also all my colleagues are (Antananarivo, Sydney, Lima and Ankara). I don't know if you're aware of what you've accomplished with this group. Thank you very much for your involvement and enthusiasm. It's great to have been able to count on you whenever we needed you. It has been the course that has required me the most and also with which I have learned and enjoyed the most. You've managed to get the best out of us, and in the end, all this time spent, those sleepless nights excited about what our formation would bring the next morning as part of the new Resistance, I feel it was worth it, I feel that with you I have managed to reach my best version, and I have discovered how precious the teaching profession is.”

“The Paper Jail has been an unforgettable learning experience. However, it has been very short, even though it has been 4 months. I never imagined that it would be the most important course in my academic life. You have helped me a lot throughout these months, and you have given me that encouragement so that I could go to class with enthusiasm, and enjoy every day, because without these classes it would have been hell for me. And best of all, I have not missed a day despite attendance was not mandatory! No wonder my mother was surprised, hehehehe. And speaking of my family, it had never happened before that every time I called my house the first question was what new mission I had on my hands. I've had my parents more hooked on the subject than when they watched the original series. Awesome! I have truly come to feel part of the new Resistance, and I look forward to the day when I become a teacher and can put into practice everything I have learned in this adventure.”
